the Senate:

"By direction of the Senate, I herewith return House bill No. 4 with advice that the amendments of the Senate thereto having received the affirmative vote of a majority of a quorum of your honorable body, the Senate regards such amendments as having been duly concurred in under the provisions of the Organic Act and more particularly section 22 thereof."

There was a deal of talk in the House before the body came to order about before the hody came to order about the power of the Senate to pass deci-sion on the acts of the House. Some members declared that it was only the courts that could interpret the acts of the House and it was an unwarrantable plece of arrogance for the Senate to send such a communication, especially as they had not first submitted the point to the Attorney General for his counter.

After the roil call, which found little more than a quorum present, the first thing that came up was the Senate's "opinion" or "decision" on the effect of the vote of the House. Dickey sarcastically remarked that it was one of the most remakable events of the century. "What business has the Senate to advise us. It is assmuch as to say that we do not know how to attend to our own business. If they consider that the bill is passed, why don't they send it to the Governor. What do they send it back here for. If our action concurred in their amendment, that is all that is necessary. The fact is that section 22 and section 46 of the Organic Act both state very plainly that a bill that business are section 46 of the Organic Act both state very plainly that a bill the number of the fines assessed Act both state very plainly that a bill 'upon its final passage' must receive the affirmative votes of a majority of all the members to which each house is the members to which each house is entitled to be taken by ayes and noes and entered on the journal. A bill is not finally passed until all amendments proposed by either House are disposed of by both houses (ther by agreeing to the amendments or withdrawing them. And when a bill then comes up for final passage it requires sixteen votes to pass it in this House."

The Speaker remarked that he had already made his decision and he did

It was needed. He said he fully agreed with Mr. Dickey as to the insolence of the Senate and moved that the Senate be given back their communication and asked for a conference or a statement of where the extra $5000 was needed. Later he stated that he had sent a note to Mr. Crabbe, chairman of the Senate Committee on Accounts and asked him where the $20,000 came in and Crabbe was not able to tell him, saything that the secretary had not yet made up the figures.

Short Sketch of Life of the Brilliant Lawyer and a Man of Many Excellent Qualities.

The flag on the government building floats at half mast today in respect to the memory of Paul Neumann who died last night at his home on King street. This public tribute of respect comes from the services of the deceased as Attorney General during the reign of King Kalakaua.

The funeral of Paul Neumann will be held this afternoon from the Masonic Temple and will be in charge or Wil-liam H, Wright, of Hawalian Lodge. The lodge will be opened at 31:50 o'clock, at which hour the cortege from the home will arrive. A drum corps of the Hawaiian National Guard, a mili-tary company and a platoon of police will be in waiting. The pall beares chosen to bear the remains of the dis-

While it was known that Mr. Neu-mann was not in the best of health, his serious illness was not known and only yesterday, the Court asked At-torney General Dole to appoint Paul Neumann as assistant in the prosecu-tion of the case against W. G. Smith. Paul Neumann was born in Prussia, December 12, 1838. He came with his parents when quite young to the United States and with them, settled on the Pacific Coast. He was married in 1879

Mr. Fitch in reply to this showed that the papers were placed in the hands of the High Sheriff on the 24th. and that the deputy served them on de-fendant O'Sullivan that night, but for some reason best known to himself neglected to serve them on the other defendants for three days. Mr. Fi the injunction order took effect the tees of Kaumakapili church, and only twelve appeared as plaintiffs and that therefore there was a non-joinder. To this Mr. Fitch replied that seven being a majority of thirteen was sufficient, and that the plaintiffs had thrown in the other five for good measure, to which the Court assented.

A third "point" of the defendants was that as the plaintiffs had a right to invoke the penal statute against bawdy houses to punish the defendants, therefore plaintiffs had a "comment at Peterson, Geo. Gibbs, Henry Giles, W. F. Love, J. A. Jones and R. A. Dexter.

therefore plaintiffs had a "remedy at law" and injunction ought not to be granted. This contention was disposed of by authorities read by Mr. Fitch to the effect that because the Territory had a right to prosecute the defendants crimmally for a nulsance already perpetrated, that did not deprive the plaints of their right to injoin a continuance of the nuisance.

Defindants attorneys next claimed that as damages were claimed, the defendants had a right to a trial by jury, and the earlity court had no jurisdiction, and here the defendants lawyers pulled out the Constitution and made it follow the flag for a while, quoting Article 7 to the effect that in cases at common law where more than $20 are involved the parties cannot be deprived of a jury trial. The counsel for plaintiffs replied that this was not a case at common law, and that in an equity case the statute gave the defendant a right to a jury trial, subject to the nower of the Court to discontinuance.

equity case the statute gave the defendant a right to a jury trial, subject to the power of the Court to disregard the verdict.

Counsel for defendants then insisted that there was no sufficient showing that lwilet was a bawdy house at all, and here the Court replied that the showing on that point was ample beyond all question. And lastly the lawyers for twilet insisted that there was no case in court at all, because the no case in court at all because the words "at chambers, in equity," did not head the complaint." Mr. Fitch states in explanation that the original complaint contained these words, but in copying the typewriter had inadvertently omitted them, and asked leave to add them now remarking that if the ently omitted them, and saked leave to add them now, remarking that if the omission were important, then the motion and demurrer of defendants should be stricken from the files, for they were erroneously headed in the Circuit Court when the case was before the Judge not the court.

Judge Gear did not grant the motion, saying that the words omitted at the head of the complaint were endorsed at on its back, and that was probably sufficient, though he would take this last point under advisement.
